I would like to know what type of powerlifting, Single/Single, etc. A: Power lifting is a "functional fitness" that is goal oriented. It is as much about being functional as it is about putting on as much weight as possible. You will be lifting lighter weights than those who train exclusively for bodybuilding, but there will be very little "big" in the way of hypertrophy. As such, powerlifting will have its own category (single/double/triple/etc..., single is the standard and it is often considered your absolute beginner level) within the weight classes. Your best bet would be to attend a powerlifting meet where you can work out in the actual weights for which you are competing, as well as take a class with a coach who has competed. This will give you the best chance of success in your first meet and will help you meet people who are already in the same boat as you. With the economic slowdown, high interest rates and an environment that has soured on the idea of using robots for manufacturing, there's an increasing amount of companies working to change the way that people think about manufacturing and automating. Emerging companies, such as Bossa Nova Robotics, have been making the case for the adoption of robot technology in the factory setting. The company recently raised $100 million in investment capital to support its mission of making robotics accessible for small companies and startups. And while it has ambitious plans, it is also working to solve a host of issues, from helping workers keep their jobs to developing a more user-friendly robot. According to Bossa Nova Robotics CEO Josh Binder, his company's goal is to create a "new world of manufacturing" with an emphasis on innovation, efficiency and safety. "There are so many challenges that exist in manufacturing today," he told CNBC's "Tech to Live By." Manufacturing is one of the most labor-intensive industries in the world 50b96ab0b6
